Norman sinks teeth into fans’ questions

Steve DiMeglio
Golfweek | USA TODAY Network

With abundant energy and enthusiasm, Greg Norman, the Great White Shark, devoured an hour’s worth of phone calls from fans this week on the appropriately named Attack Life Radio Live on Sirius XM Radio.

From Tiger Woods to the COVID-19 global pandemic to fitness tips, Norman fielded questions from all across the U.S. on Tuesday.

“Game on,” the two-time major champion and world No. 1 for 331 weeks said at the beginning. “Bring it on.”

On came the questions. Among the many was one that dealt with Tiger Woods. Specifically, the first time he met and played with Woods.

“Played with Tiger down here at Old Marsh Golf Club (in Palm Beach Gardens, Florida) when I think he was 15 years old. Got a call from some people, because I was No. 1 player at the time in the world, and they wanted me to play with him and for me to give my opinion on Tiger,” said Norman, now 65. “So I played nine holes with him and I like, wow. This kid is going to go a long way.

“He was a sponge for information. He wanted to beat you, no matter if he was 15 years old. He just wanted to prove a point that no matter who you are or whether you’re No. 1, I’m going to come after you. Which was very, very positive to see.”

Who won, the follow-up came.

“You know, I can’t remember,” Norman said. “I really can’t remember.”

Here are some of Norman’s other takes on a variety of subjects:

How he’s dealing with the global pandemic: “I’m dealing with it OK. The whole world is in this fight together. I’ve had businesses shut down. I feel for my people who have worked for me for years and years and years to experience this. But I’ve come out of this with a sense of calm in a lot of ways because this is a bit of a wake-up call for the whole universe to say, ‘Hey, it’s going to happen again.’ How you come out of this one is going to determine how you are going to be prepared for the next one. I don’t like anybody kicking the can down the road. From the doctors and the nurses and health care workers and first responders to the military, to every country around the world, each and everyone of these people are putting their lives on the line for us. I’m a big admirer. I’m just trying to manage the process myself, both mentally and physically, and go through it day by day and not try and get ahead of myself. I know we’ll come out of it. Humanity is much stronger and very intelligent and very resilient in a lot of ways, so we will come out of it.”

Why he didn’t play much senior tour golf: “I just got sick and tired of staying in hotel rooms from a Tuesday through a Sunday and just traveling, quite honestly. When I cut playing golf out of my schedule, I actually had 50% more time for myself, which was a big deal. On top of that, my business was really kicking off, my brand was kicking off, and I wanted to focus on building that out. ... I still enjoyed playing, but the passion to really perform at the highest level wasn’t there. I quietly rode off into the sunset without any fanfare.”

Fitness recommendations for someone coming out of the winter season: “Very easy. Stretching. Start getting your hamstrings stretched out, your lower back stretched out and your quads stretched out. All those things. And I would start working on squeezing a tennis ball, getting your finger strength back up. Because people forget about that when you’re hanging onto a golf club and you’re swinging, and I don’t care if your swinging it 80 mph or 120 mph, the finger strength is going to want to do it.”

CFP officials tell Pence open campuses are key

Dan Wolken
USA TODAY

Nothing that came out of Wednesday’s conference call between Vice President Mike Pence and the College Football Playoff management committee changes the bottom line for this fall: If colleges and universities aren’t open to students, it will be very difficult for the season to start on time.

That was part of the message the group relayed to Pence, according to American Athletic Conference Commissioner Mike Aresco, who told USA TODAY Sports that the White House-initiated conversation was much appreciated by college sports stakeholders as they make various contingency plans for the season.

“It was a good call,” said Aresco, who was one of the 10 conference commissioners on the call, along with Notre Dame athletic director Jack Swarbrick. “He talked about how important college sports were to the country, and we discussed how college sports were different from pro sports. We don’t have czars. We’re a national enterprise, but we’ll have local issues as we go forward. He seemed optimistic about some things and he asked us what we’d need to do if things were to reopen down the road.”

Still, it appears a consensus has formed among athletic officials that the first step toward restarting college football will be universities opening their doors. The optics of having football players on campus when it is deemed unsafe for other students to be there would not just be bad, it would potentially undercut the argument that college sports are tethered to education.

“If things are all virtual and if you can’t have kids on campus, can you justify the risks of having athletes on campus?” Aresco said. “We’re an extension of the educational system. You can argue if things are virtual and you can quarantine or isolate teams, is that feasible? I have no idea and I’m not going to venture an opinion on that at this point, but I’m not sure if it’s feasible.”

Paul enjoying family time in ‘wait-and-see’ mode

Mark Medina
USA TODAY

Usually, Chris Paul knows how to find the answer to any question he has. That is what happens when you are the president of the National Basketball Players Association. That is what happens when you’re an NBA All-Star.

This time Paul does not have any answers. How could he when no one else has them regarding when the novel coronavirus outbreak will stop and when the NBA can resume play?

“It’s really just a wait-and-see game and hoping that the coronavirus gets contained,” Paul told USA TODAY Sports this week. “What we try to do from the union perspective is try to keep guys informed as much as possible and try to prepare for what we can control.”

The Thunder guard said the NBPA is having ongoing conversations with the league on how it could salvage the season. But he stressed the NBPA cares about only one variable: “If there is any way possible that we can play games for our fans without putting anyone’s health at risk, that is what everybody’s option is. But everybody understands health comes first before any of that.”

Paul

Once the season was put on hold March 11, Paul could not wait to return to his home in Encino, California, to be with his wife (Jada), 10-year-old son (Chris) and 7-year-old daughter (Camryn). He had spent most of his first season in Oklahoma City away from his family.

“This is the most we’ve all been able to be together,” Paul said. “That’s the case for a lot of families at home. It’s one of those things where you learn new things and learn not to take some things for granted.”

Paul has maximized his family time. So much so that he did not seem to consider it difficult to put his frustration over his successful season (10th NBA All-Star Game appearance) into perspective: “I’m a hell of a competitor. But I think, first and foremost, I’m a human being.”

Confined with shelter-in-place rules, Paul has included his family in his workouts. With his kids taking classes through Zoom sessions, Paul has tried to help them with their homework assignments. He admittedly does not often know the answers.

“For most athletes, we always strive to be the best and try to be perfect. I’ve been able to realize how I’m not perfect. I’m not. That’s OK. You can get better at it. So I’m just trying to be better in different aspects.”
